Brief History

The British Library was created on 1 July 1973 as a result of the British Library Act 1972. Prior to this, the national library was part of the British Museum, which provided the bulk of the holdings of the new library, alongside smaller organizations which were folded in (such as the National Central Library, the National Lending Library for Science and Technology and the British National Bibliography). The British library catalogs are eagerly sought by bibliographers, and research scholars. The catalogues of the British Library represent the splendid collection of great library. It is the major retrospective tool for searching for publications on any subject, published in any language, anywhere, at any time, especially for publications of British origin.

Scope and Coverage

With "Explore the British Library" user can search the main British Catalogues for millions of records for books, journals, newspapers, printed maps, scores, electronic resources, sound archive items etc. in the Library's collections. Also get access for the Website for thousands of records for Library web pages, and millions of freely available articles. The British Library collection contains huge amount of resources which includes America's studies, Business and intellectual property, Classics, Maps, Music, News media, Visual arts, etc. The whole library collection covers art, architecture and performing arts, business, management and law, design and fashion, history (including family history), literature, poetry, fiction, philosophy and religion, science, technology and medicine, social sciences etc.

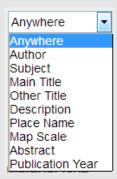

Explore the British Library includes records for items received under legal deposit, which have been added to the collections. These records are also included in the British National Bibliography which also includes records for forthcoming UK books and for UK published items which have been catalogued by the other legal deposit libraries. Explore the British Library does not include records of the Library's archive and manuscript collections, which will now be found in Search our Catalogues Archives and Manuscripts. As a legal deposit library, the British Library receives copies of all books produced in the United Kingdom and Ireland, including a significant proportion of overseas titles distributed in the UK.

Kind of Information

In Simple Search option users just has to put the key word in the search bar. In Advanced search option (the following screen shot) users are provided options to filter the search queries by adding Boolean operators. There are other options like material type, start date, end date, etc. to limit search results.

In advance search options users can select the following fields:

After completing the search users are provided following list:

If users want to access the details about any item, then they have to click the "Details" option (see the above screen shot) to get information like title, contributor or author, subjects, publication details, language, identifier, notes, physical description, shelfmark(s) etc. The following screen shot is an example:

Under each item's detailed information, there are links to the Item Holdings, the record in Copac, the record in WorldCat, the Report Catalogue Error and the MARC display, etc.

Special Features

- An easy-to-use refine facility, to filter the search Results is provided.
- Alerts, for registered readers and registered document supply customers who log in, to provide them with updated results from their search queries.
- > The website provides facility to tag or add notes about the interesting items by the users.
