Welcome to the World Flag Database

Welcome to the beta of the new version of The World Flag Database. The original version was initially created some twenty years ago, in 1996, when the Internet was in its infancy. Many people still had screens only 640 pixels across, and HTML and CSS were just starting to develop. It has had a number of cosmetic development since then, but it is time for a complete redo.

The new version is now completely database-driven, using MySQL and PHP. This will make it much easier to update and add new flags. The visual design is now more 2016 and less 1996. The background colour has been chosen so that all flags show up well against it,

The navigation is different in the site. There are still individual indices for each letter of the alphabet which show the countries, sub-nationals and organizations that start with that letter. There are also indices for head of state flags, naval ensign, civil ensigns, international organizations and signal flags. There are also previous and next arrow buttons whose actions change depending upon what users are looking at: when looking at a letter index, the buttons take users to the previous and next index pages; when looking at a country's page, the buttons take users through the sections of flags for that country; when looking at an individual flag from a country, the buttons take users through the other flags in that section; and when looking at an individual flag from search results, the buttons take users through the other flags that match.

Arrangement Pattern

Entries are arranged in alphabetical order by country name or organization name.
